

California Condor

The California Condor is a critically endangered New World species of vulture. Captive breeding programs are helping the California Condor population recover. These large birds are overall black with white edging on some wing feathers. The head is naked and deep pink and the eyes are brownish red.