

Red-crowned Crane

The Red-crowned Crane is found in parts of eastern Asia. They are named for the bare patch of red skin on the top of the head. This changes in intensity depending on the time of year. They have a white body plumage with black feathers on the ends of the wings.

See colors and learn more

