

Resplendent Quetzal

The Resplendent Quetzal is a spectacular bird in the trogon family that lives in parts of Central America. It averages 15 inches in length, while the tail of a breeding male can measure 25 inches or more. It has a green body plumage with a red breast. The male has a helmet-shaped crest and a yellow beak.

See colors and learn more

See the colors and more cute birds at www.birdorable.com