

Sandhill Crane

The Sandhill Crane is the most abundant species of crane, with a wide distribution across much of North America. These large birds have a mostly grey plumage with a high degree of variability. Some birds may spread mud on themselves during breeding season, which gives their feathers a brownish hue.

See colors and learn more

